FOREWORD

It is a matter of gratification for me to write a Foreword to the Sixth Volume of the New Catalogus Catalogorum published by the Department of Sanskrit, University of Madras. It was at the suggestion of Dr. A. C. Woolner, the linguist and Vice-Chancellor of the Punjab University, that the task of bringing out a revised edition of the Catalogus Catalogorum, originally published by Dr. Theodor Aufrecht, incorporating therein further relevent entries, was taken up by the University of Madras in 1935. That Dr. Aufrecht took 42 years to publish three volumes of the Catalogus Catalogorum is an indication of the magnitude of the work.

I am glad to note that for a period of three years the Rockefeller Foundation extended its financial help to this project. I should like to express, on behalf of the University, our appreciation of the generous financial assistance rendered by the University Grants Commission both for the publication of these volumes and for the additional staff engaged in this task. I take this opportunity of placing on record, on behalf of the University, our deep appreciation of the keen interest and guidance that the Late Sri K. Balasubramanya Iyer, my esteemed colleague and member of the Syndicate and Chairman of the Publication Committee of the New Catalogus Catalogorum, evinced in its publication all these years.

It is hoped that Dr. K. Kunjunni Raja and his colleagues will be able to bring out the remaining volumes, two in a year as already envisaged, on the lines laid down by his predecessors, Dr. C. Kunhan Raja and Dr. V. Raghavan who had done pioneering work in publishing the earlier volumes. The series of volumes that remain to be printed will, I hope, when completed, contribute to further research in diverse fields of Indology and help in the critical edition of Sanskrit and allied works.

PREFACE

In order to expedite the work of the New Catalogus Catalogorum I was appointed as its Associate Editor in 1966 and on the retirement of Prof. V. Raghavan from the University by the end of 1968 and my subsequent appointment as the Professor of Sanskrit, the task of preparing and editing the remaining volumes fell on my shoulders. Volume V was published in 1969 and work on Volumes VI and VII started. Handicapped as we were due to lack of full complement of Staff, it is a matter of gratification that Volume VI, extending from Gāyatrī° to Caha is now published. Work on Volume VII is also progressing and about 100 pages have already been printed.

As in the case of the previous volumes the complete bibliography and abbreviations are not reproduced here; only those that are additionally used in this volume are given. Complete bibliography and abbreviations will be found in volume I and volume II.

Among the important items on which special editorial work had to be done in this volume are the different authors with identical names like Gokulanātha, Gopāla, Gopīnātha, Govardhana, Govinda and Candraśekhara; works like Gītagovinda, Gommaṭasāra, Grahalāghava, Caturvargacintāmaṇi, Candrāloka and Catuśśaraṇa and authors like Guṇāḍhya, Gorakṣanātha and Ghaṭakarpara.

Dr. V. Raghavan who was associated with the work of the New Catalogus Catalogorum from its inception and who was mainly responsible for its planning and direction, has been kind enough to go through the proofs and give useful suggestions. I am grateful to him for his valuable advice.

Sri K. Balasubrahmanya Iyer, Chairman of the Publication Committee of the New Catalogus Catalogorum, passed away in 1970. He was a great lover of Indian Culture and had been taking a personal interest in expediting the work. Though he is not with us, his words of exhortation and encouragement will ever remain a source of inspiration to us in our work.

Dr. A. Lakshmanaswami Mudaliar, who was a member of the Committee which in 1935 recommended the undertaking of the New Catalogus Catalogorum project by the Madras University and who was interested in its speedy completion, retired from the Vice-Chancellorship of the University in 1969. I wish to record my gratefulness to him for his encouragement and advice.

Thiru N. D. Sundaravadivelu, the present Vice-Chancellor of the University, has by his encouragement and advice enabled me to carry on the tremendous work of the New Catalogus Catalogorum project along with the normal work of the Sanskrit Department. I am deeply indebted to him for his kindness and also for readily giving a valuable Foreword to this volume.

I am thankful to the members of the Staff of the New Catalogus Catalogorum, past and present, for their devoted work and to the Rathnam Press for their cooperation in bringing out this volume.

गीतगोविन्द musical poem on the love of Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā, intended for dance and gesticulation, with recitative link verses; in 12 cantos comprising 24 dance-songs; as each song is in eight feet, the poem is commonly called Aṣṭapadī, especially in South India; characterised variously as 'a little pastoral drama' by Jones, 'a lyric drama' by Lassen, 'a refined Yātrā' by von Schroeder; and as being between song and drama by Pischel and Sylvain Levi. Pischel's view that the work goes back to an original in Apabhraṁśa (Die Hofdichter des Lakṣmaṇasena, p. 22) is not correct. (See Keith, History of Skt. Lit. p. 197 also Skt. Drama, pp. 17, 40, 272.). By Jayadeva, son of Bhojadeva and Rāmādevī (Vāmādevī or Rādhādevī), of Keindubilva village (modern Kenduli) on the Ajay river in Birbhum district in West Bengal; there is also a strong tradition identifying J.'s birthplace as being in Orissa; patronised by King Lakṣmaṇasena of Bengal (C. 1185–1205); wife Padmāvatī is ref. to by a. as an accomplished danseuse (I. 2).

A verse from it q. in an inscription in Patan d. 1292 A.D.; two songs from it paraphrased by the oldest Middle-Bengali poet Baḍu Caṇḍīdāsa in his Śrīkṛṣṇakīrtana; echoes from the work are found in the early Gujarati poem Vasantavilāsa; in an Oriya inscription in Pūri temple d. 1499 A.D. of King Pratāparudra, singers and dancers were ordered to use songs from Gītagovind alone.

On Gītagovinda and Jayadeva see AR. III. p. 184ff.; Manmohan Chakravarti, Proceed. ASB. 1906, pp. 163–69; S. K. Chatterji, Acharya Dhruva Comm. Volume, pp. 183–199; Keith *Hist. of Skt. The C. Padabhāvārthacandrikā by S'rīkānta Mis'ra looks like a variant version of this. See IO. i. p. 1456b. One of the two must have palmed off the other's work as his own. S'aṅkara Mis'ra is different from the Naiyāyika of that name (wrongly taken as identical in Mithilā II. iii. 43). He was a pupil of Rāmes'vara (father of Nārāyaṇa Bhaṭṭa who wrote a C. on Vṛttaratnākara) and lived in the 16th Cent. See Ind. Ant. XLI. 1912, p 9.

गुणाढ्य a. of Bṛhatkathā (non-extant) in Paiśācī Pkt.; for legends about Guṇāḍhya's life see Kathāsaritsāgara I. 6–8 which would place him in A.D.; two recensions of his work are known through their Skt. adaptations (1) the Kashmir recension represented by Somadeva's Kathāsaritsāgara (See NCC. III. p. 136b) and Kṣemendra's Bṛhatkathāmañjarī (See NCC. V. p. 168), and (2) the so-called Nepal recension represented by the Bṛhatkathāślokasaṅgraha of Budhasvāmin. The Gaṅga King Durvinīta, contemporary of Bhāravi (7th Cent. A.D.) is said to have made a Skt. rendering of the work (Ind. Ant. 1913, p. 204; JRAS. 1913, p. 389ff.). There is a Tamil version in the Peruṅkatai of Koṅguvel, edn. U. Swaminatha Iyer, Madras, 1924 (C. 2nd Cent. A.D.) and a Persian version, see Lacote, Essai, p. 197ff.

The Pkt. version of the story is found in Vāsudeva-hiṇḍī of Saṅghadāsa and Dharmasena (See L. Alsdorf, BSOAS. VIII. pp. 320ff).

Ref. to by Daṇḍin, Subandhu, Bāṇa; also by Jinasena (Ādipurāṇa), and Somadeva (Yaśastilakacampū). On stories about Guṇāḍhya see also Jayaratha's Haracaritacintāmaṇi. Govardhana considers him an incarnation of Vyāsa.

A Cambodian ins. of 9th Cent. A.D. ref. to him 'Guṇāḍhyaḥ Prākṛtapriyaḥ' (S. Levi, JA. 1885. 412). On the home of Guṇāḍhya, see V. V. Mirashi XVI. AIOC. Summaries, pp. 153–4.

गुह्यसमाजतन्त्र Bud. (C. 300 A.D.) one of the earliest Buddhist tantras of the Vajrayāna school; originated in South India according to Tibetan traditions; in two parts; the Pūrvārdha in 18 Paṭalas is also called Aṣṭādaśapaṭala, the second part called Uttarārdha or Aparārdha is said to be spurious and is in 15 Paṭalas; sometimes confused with the Mahāyāna text Tathāgataguhyasūtra. (See Winternitz, HIL. II, p. 392; IHQ. IX. i, pp. 1–2); but they are different. See L. M. Joshi, J. of Ori. Inst. M. S. Uni. Baroda XVI. pp. 138ff.

गौडपाद adv. philosopher; traditionally considered as the teacher of Govinda and paramaguru of S'aṅkarācārya; the name Gauḍa suggests that he belonged to Bengal; Bhāvaviveka, in the first half of sixth Cent., q. verses from the Gauḍapāda Kārikās in his C. Tarkajvālā on his own Mādhyamikahṛdayakārikā, ch. VIII; and influence of Nāgārjuna, Āryadeva and Asaṅga is traced by scholars in his Kārikās; hence has to be assigned to the fifth Century A.D. See K. Kunjunni Raja, Adyar Library Bulletin, vol. XXIV. p. 130. Several legends are narrated about him in different works.

For general study on Gauḍapāda, see Dasgupta, Hist. of Ind. Philosophy, Vol. I. pp. 423–9; Vidhusekhara Bhattacharya, Āgamas'āstra of Gauḍapāda, University of Calcutta, 1943; T. M. P. Ptd. Kāvyasaṅgraha Pt. I. pp. 374–380. Jīvānandavidyāsāgar. Calcutta, 1888.

घटकर्पर yamaka kāvya in 22 verses in different metres expressing the feelings of a lady whose husband is away (Proṣitapatikā) at the beg. of the rainy season; the name used for the poem and often for its a. is due to the reference to 'a potsherd (ghaṭakarpara)' in a wager in its last verse; ascribed to Ghaṭakarpara, one of the nine gems of Vikramāditya's court according to tradition; many mss. and commentaries ascribe it to Kālidāsa.

See V. Raghavan, Mirashi Fel. Vol. (Nagpur) 1965. pp. 148–9.

On the Ghaṭakarpara and the Meghadūta see Ch. Vaudville, Proceed. AIOC. Vol. 20, Pt. II. i. pp. 37–48; J. B. Chaudhuri (Intro. to his edn.) considers Gh. earlier than Meghadūta and as representing an intermediate stage between the epic and Meghadūta.

On the different titles of the poem, Ghaṭakarpara, Gh. kalāpakāvya, Gh. kulaka, Gh. kāvya, its authorship and its literary value, see K. C. Pandey, Abhinavagupta (2nd edn. 1963) pp. 94–131.

Kṛṣṇalīlā of Madana is a Samasyāpūraṇakāvya using lines from Ghaṭakarpara. See NCC. IV. p. 353.
